

For Dianne, It's Personal

Dianne Sawaya's desire to bring a more personal, compassionate approach to injury law led her to found The Law Offices of Dianne Sawaya. She was born and raised in Denver, and her family is the fifth generation to live in Colorado, since before the turn of the 20th century. Those deep roots are why helping the people of the Denver area is so special to her.

Dianne first knew she wanted to be a lawyer when as a child she saw a Family Circus cartoon in the newspaper that said, "When I grow up, I don't want to be a lady—I want to be a lawyer." While the cartoon inspired her as a child, it was her advocacy skills and drive to help the people of Denver that set her on the path to law school.

Dianne attended University of Colorado in Boulder where she was a pre-medicine student and received her bachelor of arts. She received her law degree from the University of Denver School of Law. Her pre-med studies help her understand what her personal injury clients are going through. For Dianne –and all of her staff –it's very satisfying to help people when they are most vulnerable. After all, they call it "personal injury" for a reason: you're injured, and it's personal.

Dianne and her staff are driven by a strong need to help clients get justice in a system that is often stacked against them. Any one individual fighting a big insurance company stands little chance of getting that justice. But Dianne knows that with her help, clients can –and do –win. Knowing she was a part of that is what drives her every day.

Drive Safely – Kids Are Back in School!

The school bell is ringing and kids are headed back to the books. It's never more important for drivers to slow down and pay attention than when kids are present –especially when children are walking, crossing streets and riding their bikes.

Watch for lower speed limits around schools. Look out for kids darting into the street. Double-check bike lanes before turning. Always slow down and stop for school buses with flashing yellow or red lights. Don't drive around a school bus that has lights flashing –it's illegal. After school, take precaution around sports fields and parks.

Over 37,000 people die in car accidents each year. How can this be prevented?

Learn about the impact that distracted driving has on these deaths and also what we can do to make our roads safer.
